

A Guide to Military Divorce In New Jersey From federal rules involving division of military pensions to devising child custody plans that take into account military parents on active duty, servicemembers and their spouses face a number of special legal issues when they decide to divorce. Are you prepared for the road ahead? Noted New Jersey divorce attorney and coauthor of the law book, Strategies for Military Family Law, Bari Z. Weinberger provides U.S. military servicemembers and their spouses with concise, authoritative information on the need-to-know basics of military divorce. Readers of this guide will be offered the opportunity to:

- Understand military residency requirements concerning where to file for divorce.
- Learn different options for serving U.S. servicemembers with divorce papers, including servicemembers on active duty deployment.
- Find out how the Servicemembers Civil Relief Act (SCRA) protects servicemembers from default judgements and what steps the Courts can take to delay certain hearings and procedures for active duty personnel.
- Learn the formulas used to calculate child support for servicemembers and how child support payments are enforced.
- Discover how laws passed by many states, including New Jersey, address the special need for flexibility in child custody arrangements when one or both parents are in the service -- and find out how this might apply to your child custody situation.
- Understand the rules for dividing military pensions including the "10/10" rule for long-term marriages.
- Find out how divorce can affect military medical benefits and military survival benefits.

"Our family was stationed in New Jersey at the time we decided to divorce and I was confused, to say the least, about what to do. I found the information in this guide to be so incredibly helpful for figuring out how to take that first step." D.P., Camden County

"If you are divorcing a servicemember, or are one yourself, this guide does a great job of explaining military rules pertaining to divorce, child support, child custody and other related issues, in a very understandable way. It's always best to be prepared!" D.R., Monmouth County

"I worked with a Weinberger Law Group attorney during my divorce and was impressed with her skill and experience with military law. I had talked with many attorneys who really couldn't tell me what to expect. I am glad I found Weinberger Law Group. Thank you!" E.H. Burlington County
